Bureau adopts disarmament appeal, affirms faith in UN

The SI Bureau held its second meeting of the year in Vienna on October 15-16, at the invitation of the Socialist Party of Austria (SPÖ). The venue was the imposing Hofburg, the headquarters of the old Imperial Austrian administration, where one of the three main East-West arms-control fora, or reductions in conventional arms in Europe (MBFR), has been meeting regularly since 1974. Thus the Hofburg — the bureau met in the very room where the MBFR talks are held — provided a highly symbolic background to two of the issues which figured the prominently in the discussions, disarmament and multilateral cooperation. In preparation for the SI Disarmament Conference held at the same venue immediately following its meeting, the Bureau adopted the Vienna Appeal on Disarmament. In addition to the appeal, the Bureau adopted resolutions supporting the efforts to establish a chemical-weapons-free zone in Central Europe and a nuclear-free zone in the South Pacific (for full texts, see Documents, page 36 and 38; for full report on the conference, see pages 27-29.)

Vienna, host to a number of specialist agencies of the United Nations, was a no less appropriate venue to discuss the meeting’s main theme, ‘The fortieth anniversary of the United Nations, and multilateral cooperation’. The Bureau adopted a major statement affirming the SI’s intention ‘to remain one of the main international forces in support of the United Nations’ (for full text, see Documents, page 36). Major resolutions on the environment, Southern Africa, Central America, Chile and finance and development were also adopted (for full texts, see Documents, pages 36-38). The Middle East and Latin America were important parts of the agenda as well. Among its decisions, the Bureau accepted an invitation from the Peruvian Aprista Party (APRA) to hold the 1986 congress in Lima; recommended the Democratic Labour Party (PDT) of Brazil for membership of the SI; and set up a Study Group on Africa (see reports on page 35). A short text condemning terrorism was also adopted. It states that ‘Democratic socialists ... affirm that under no circumstances can acts of terrorism, whether performed by individuals, groups or governments, be justified.’

Opening the meeting, Leopold Graz, the chairman of the Viennese SPÖ and Austrian foreign minister, said that the Socialist International gave the lie to the statements of the right wing forces in recent years, that the democratic left had lost its popular support for member parties the world over — of the fact that ‘people recognise and value the efforts and intervention of the democratic left’.

It was imperative that the left continue its struggle to achieve the objectives of social justice, the participation of all men and women in decisions which affect their future, the eradication of hunger and unemployment, and above all the preservation of peace. Although there were no miracle cures, socialists ‘must show, not only in our manifestos, but above all by practical example, that we will deal with the challenges of the present; not only as “doctors at the sickbed of capitalism” but also as pioneers of a more humane society’.

In his opening remarks, SI president Willy Brandt thanked the SPÖ for its invitation to the Bureau and for its efforts in organising the SI Disarmament Conference. Brandt emphasised ‘a very important mission we have to fulfil’, namely that of realising human rights, a struggle which was indivisible. ‘We must fight for them everywhere on our planet. That is why we adopted in recent years commitments towards Chile and Afghanistan, Central America and Eastern European countries, the Middle East and South Africa.’

Socialists should fight for human rights with unflinching courage, in particular in cases where conservatives had paid lip service but had done nothing else — South Africa offering most glaring example of this.

The main theme was introduced by Peter Jankowitsch (SPÖ, Austria), a former Austrian ambassador to the UN.

Peter Jankowitsch, Fernando Vera, Guillermo Ungo
The United Nations was today under increasing attack from a phalanx led by neo-conservatives from North America and old conservatives from Europe, and other traditional enemies of internationalism. And it was no doubt true, he said, that the United Nations had disappointed many hopes and that there were many factors within the UN system which had greatly reduced its effectiveness over the years. He mentioned 'bureaucratization and ritualisation of the multilateral process as real problems'.

But much of the criticism levelled at the UN could be attributed to the fact that the organisation had never really developed as intended. The transformation of a largely colonised world into a polity of at present 159 sovereign members of the UN had never been considered by its founders. The world as seen in 1945 from San Francisco was essentially white, western and christian; now it is a much more colourful place'.

Among the achievements of the United Nations, Jankowitsch mentioned: the avoidance of general war; democratization of international relations; creation of peace-keeping forces; promotion of economic development; elaboration of an international political machinery; and heightened awareness of human rights issues.

The UN should be open to new realities, aspirations and paradigms, he said. It could do more, for instance, to monitor both the environment and societies through the collection, analysis and dissemination of relevant information; facilitate the sharing of experiences and ideas; promote mutual understanding and education through dialogue and negotiation among countries, cultures and societies; and formulate alternative policy options for steering a world society in transition, Jankowitsch concluded.

Jan Pronk (PvdA, Netherlands) noted the link between the role of the United Nations and multilateralism and the world economic crisis. The economic, financial, and environmental problems of today could not be tackled by individual countries, but only at a global level, he said. People were still overly attached to the solutions of the 1960s and 1970s, which were no longer appropriate because the world had changed since then.

The chairman of the Committee on Economic Policy, SICEP, Michael Manley (PNP, Jamaica), reviewing the work on a strategy to overcome the economic crisis, said that Global Challenge - the committee's report adopted at the last Bureau and launched on September 25 - represented the first major challenge by the democratic left to the ideas of the radical right that had gained ascendancy in the early 1980s.

Introducing the Middle East discussion, Shimon Peres (Israel Labour Party) said that the main issue today was how to proceed and build the momentum for peace.

Concerning the Israeli raid on the PLO headquarters in Tunis on October 1, Peres said that although an act of violence, it was also an act of self-defence against a terrorist organisation which, he underlined, had not given up the covenant calling for the destruction of Israel, nor had it renounced violence.

Support for peace must include three points, Peres said: the peace process should be set above all other considerations, in order to maintain the momentum for peace; support for direct negotiations between Israel and Jordan; and the renunciation of terror.

Elazar Granot (MAPAM, Israel) suggested that, in addition, the Socialist International should declare the Arab-Israeli conflict and the Palestinian national problem could not be solved through the use of arms, and that it should call for a mutually agreed-upon end to the vicious circle of bloodletting in order to expedite the beginning of negotiations.

Other speakers stressed that the PLO would have to recognise the right of Israel to exist. At the same time, the rights of the Palestinian people to self-determination, including a Palestinian state, would have to be accepted by all parties. Several speakers urged the Israeli government to negotiate with the PLO, for 'peace, if it is to be lasting, must be made with one's enemies, not with one's self-appointed partners', according to Karl Blecha (SPO, Austria).

Commenting on the issues raised in the discussion, President Brandt said that 'most of us belong to states which owe their existence to violence; this is a fact of history'. In the Middle East, however, violence could not offer a solution. 'The condemnation of violence is not enough and will not lead to peace; we must add other elements which might lead to negotiations and perhaps to final solutions', he said.

The Austrian minister for health and the environment, Kurt Steyerl, introduced the discussion on environmental problems.

It should be borne in mind, he argued, that security policy as envisaged by socialists was not just a military or defence question but a comprehensive strategy aimed at achieving a humane existence for all people. In this understanding of the term 'security', the destruction of the environment, which affected nearly all countries, was also a problem of security. Moreover, 'environmental destruction is also a security problem because it can affect political and economic stability and thus spark off military threat or even military conflicts'.

Carlos Andres Perez (AD, Venezuela), speaking on behalf of the Committee for Latin America and the Caribbean (SICCAC), said that the fundamental problem of the region was still that of indebtedness, with its serious implications for the democratization process.

Regretting that there were few positive developments to report from Central America, he emphasised the need for European parties to increase their support for parties in Latin America and for the Contadora effort to end conflict in the region.

In the debate on Southern Africa, speakers reported on their parties' and governments' contribution to the liberation struggle. Olof Palme (SAP, Sweden) noted that outside pressure on the apartheid regime was becoming ever more important — although even greatest action was of no avail — and the contributions by socialists in this effort were impressive. He cited the meeting of members of the business community with the ANC in Lusaka in September as a typical example of the effectiveness of outside pressure.

The Bureau also heard reports from the Asia-Pacific Socialist Organisation, APSO, in which it was noted that the region would no doubt become an area of expansion for the SI in future, if only because it was gaining in importance in global economic and strategic terms; from the Chile Committee on its meeting in Madrid (see report on page 33); and from the New Declaration of Principles Committee, SINDEC, which will hold a major meeting in Madrid on February 14, 1986.

List of participants
Socialist International Bureau Meeting Vienna, Austria, October 15-16, 1985

Socialist International
Willy Brandt
Pentti Väinöläinen
Robin V. Sears
Luis Ayala

Australia
Australian Labor Party, ALP
Stephen Loosley

Austria
Socialist Party of Austria, SPÖ
Fred Sinowitz
Karl Blecha
Heinz Fischer
Jolanda Offenbeck
Fritz Marsch
Peter Schedler
Peter Jankowitz
Walter Hacker

Belgium
Socialist Party, PS
Étienne Godin

Belgium
Socialist Party, SP
Karel van Miert
Oscar Debunne
Karla Gale

Burkina Faso
Progressive Front of Upper Volta, FPV
Joseph Ki-Zerbo

Canada
New Democratic Party, NDP
Ed Broadbent
Steve Lee

Chile
Radical Party, PR
Enrique Silva Cimma

Costa Rica
National Liberation Party, PLN
Carlos Villalobos
Alejandro Montesino

Denmark
Social Democratic Party
Steen Christiansen
Lasse Budtz
Kristen Jensen

El Salvador
National Revolutionary Movement, MNR
Guillermo Ungu
Héctor Oquiel
Jorge Sol

Finland
Social Democratic Party of Finland, SDP
Erkki Lukkari
Laurens Kangas
Adam Roselli
Riitta Korhonen
Juha Aro

France
Socialist Party, PS
Jacques Huntzinger
Jean-Bernard Curial
Pascal Boniface

Germany, Federal Republic
Social Democratic Party of Germany, SPD
Egon Bahr
Horst Ehmke
Hans-Eberhard Dingels

Great Britain
The Labour Party
Jenny Lilley

Guatemala
Democratic Socialist Party of Guatemala, PSD
Enrique de León

Ireland
The Labour Party
Tony Kinsella
Brendan Halligan

Israel
Israel Labour Party
Shimon Peres
Uzi Baram
Israel Gatt
Nava Arad

Ireland
United Workers' Party, MAPAM
Blazer Granot
Arie Jaffe
Dan Baram

Italy
Italian Democratic Socialist Party, PSD
Iyanka Corti
Antonio Cingia

Italy
Italian Socialist Party, PSI
Claudio Martelli
Margherita Boniver
Paolo Vittorelli
Francesco Quozzato

Jamaica
People's National Party
Michael Manley

Japan
Democratic Socialist Party, DSP
Roo Watanabe
Sachiko Taguchi

Japan
Socialist Party of Japan, SPD
Eiji Yasui

Luxembourg
Luxembourg Socialist Workers' Party, LSAP/PSOL
Raymond Becker

Malaysia
Democratic Action Party, DAP
P. Patto

Mauritius
Mauritius Labour Party
Satchar Boedel
Batakristna Teeroovengadum

Netherlands
Labour Party, PvdA
Maarten van Vlaar
Klaas de Vries
Wim Kok

Norway
Norwegian Labour Party, DNA
Reutl Stein
Thorvald Stoltenberg

Paraguay
Revolutionary Fathererista Party, PRF
Fernando Vera

Portugal
Socialist Party, PS
Flávio Rosa

San Marino
Unitarian Socialist Party, PSU
Patriza Busignani
Walde shoulders

Senegal
Socialist Party of Senegal
Leopold Senghor
Abdel Kader Fall
Caroline Dup

Spain
Spanish Socialist Workers' Party, PSOE
José-Maria Benegas
Elena Flores
Rafael Estrella

Sweden
Swedish Social Democratic Party, SAP
Olof Palme

Switzerland
Social Democratic Party of Switzerland, PSD
Helmut Hüberer
Heinrich Buchänder

USA
Democratic Socialists of America, DSA
Michael Harrington

USA
Social Democrats, SDSUSA
Joel Freedman

Venezuela
Democratic Action, AD
Carlos Andres Perez
Reinaldo Figueredo
Timoteo Zambrano

Fraternal Organisations
IMF/SEI
International Falcon
Movement/Socialist Educational International
Reinhold Eckhardt

IUSY
International Union of Socialist Youth
Dirk Drijbrooms
Robert Kredig

SI Women
Socialist International Women
Lydie Schmit
Imre Karlsson

Consultative Parties
Cyprus
EDEN Socialist Party of Cyprus
Theodoulos Charalambides

St Lucia
Progressive Labour Party, PLP
George Odum

Associated Organisations
CSPEC
Confederation of the Socialist Parties of the Caribbean
Mauro Galliambo

SUCCE
Socialist Union of Central and Eastern Europe
Vikem Bernard
Stanislaw Wask

WLZM
World Labour Zionist Movement
Gideon Kouts

Observers
Organisations
European Parliament
Socialist Group
Rudi Adam
Paolo Maria Falcone

ANC
Tony Seedat

IAH
Kurt Partzsch

SWAPO
Anton Lubowski
Nghidimondjila Shoombo

Parties
Brazil
PTB
Matheus Schmidt
Miguel Boadea

Brazil
PMDB
Fernando Gasparian

Greece
PASOK
Panos Neocleous

Korea
Alliance for Democracy and Reunification of Korea
Doong Hoo Bae
M.S. Rim
Gank-kook Bae

Korea
SDP
Kim Chui
Kim Moon Park
Tai Ho Shin
Doo Young Kwon

Morocco
USFP
Abderahim Bouabdil
Fatahah Ouallalol
M. Lahbabi

Nicaragua
FSLN
José Pasos
Ivan Mejia-Solls
Haifel Rivera

Panama
PRD
Nils Castro

Tunisia
PSD
Sofi Baccouche
Sadok Fayala

Tunisia
MUP
Ahmed Ben Salah

Turkey
SODEM
Erdağ İnoğlu
Dr Kumbarchibası

USA
Democratic Party
John Laxello

Guests
Philippines
Agapito Aquino
Alberto Ortu
Hans Janschek
Jan Pronk